Sergeant's Report

WHAT A RABBLE!

It is a thankless task trying to keep a group of reprobates in order, but someone has to do it.

The first thing to do is to get them to shut up. Luckily, I have a loud voice and with a few gesticulations, most of the pack come to order. There are

Now the charges

Some people seem never to be on time, (you know who you are) and they are a fertile source for charges. I distinctly remember that one day the main transgressor came early, and was therefore charged for breaking their own habits.

Other people can't but moan and complain about everything, and unfortunately, he/she/they have become role models for others. What a lot of whingers! Never mind, it is

Others are naïve to think that they can tell me things or that they think that I don't overhear others in conversation. Nothing is sacred, and everything is chargeable. Beware everyone, say nothing!

Long winded charges are also a no-go area. Any charge longer than 30 seconds can drone on for 2 to 3 minutes. By that time most of the pack are bored or looking into their beer bottles. Make it short and snappy and you will be well rewarded.

Finally, there is something more boring than long winded charges: that is there are too many charges. After about ten charges, people either want to go home, or the meal is about to be served. Let's make it short and sharp and everyone will be happy.

Now that my time as Sergeant is coming to a close. I wish my successor lots of laughs.

Report from Hash Flash—Esra— reporting from the depths of a Canberra winter.

Upon Lakeside naming me, I decided to share my flashing prowess with you.

I am sure I appointed myself Hash Flash, long before I was given the job (which E&B assures me, I was definitely given—as she has the photo to prove it!).

I am also sure that many of you got sick of the MANY photos I took, but I loved exploring Melbourne with you.

Thanks for encouraging me to flash in the laneways, pubs and parks of Melbourne with you.

Here's to more beers, gin, runs and walks and ESRA flashing with you all again soon.

Oh, and thanks for playing along on the run I set and taking the photos for me at the Hash Halts.

Miss you all

ESRA xx

Report from Assistant GM— Four Pack

The Year of the Whippet— 2023-24 Annual Trash Mag

A bit of hash history—NickelB's first hash

The Man Who Never Short Cut

No this doesn't refer to me but the man who introduced me to Hash. At the time, he was manager for Asia and I was working in Kalimantan Timur (East Borneo) on the coast just north of the equator at a place called Bontang. Where we were working on, at

It was when I was reporting on progress in Jakarta that I was invited (more told) to run in the Jakarta Men's Hash. Objections that I couldn't run were overruled and off we went. At the run site there were a group of lean and athletic looking types doing stretching exercises and general pre-run limbering up exercises that didn't do my confidence any good.

However there was another group of fat, unfit looking people leaning on cars, drinking beer and smoking. I had been told about checks and to call On On if I found the trail which would be marked with paper. Nothing about the possibility some may short cut.

I thought I can surely keep up with these. So my plan was I would not worry about the fast runners but make sure I kept ahead of the unfit looking group. My plan worked well until we came to the first check. Here I yelled On On loud and long to the back group. They ignored my calls and branched off. By this time the pack had disappeared from sight. The only course left to me was to follow the paper trail and hope for the best. When the trail passed through any small village there was no paper. Fortunately I could speak enough Indonesian to ask where the runners had gone. They told me always adding the helpful advice that I should run faster. Towards the end a late starter caught up with me and we finished the run together. Imagine my surprise to see all the unfit people there still drinking beers. Obviously they must have found a shorter way. When I asked my manager why he hadn't told me about short cutting he replied "runners never short cut".

The Year of the Whippet— 2023-24 An-

Some years later I was building a wharf and breakwater in Honiara in the Solomon Islands when he visited me. Of course he wanted to run on the Honiara Hash House Harriers. The terrain there was like running along a saw. The moment you breasted one hill a valley and another hill was directly in front of you. It was no wonder that the Japanese and Americans fought each other until they ran out of ammunition. The Americans managed to re-supply faster and finally captured the airport and harbour. They never managed to completely beat the Japanese but finally controlled enough of the important infrastructure to move on.

I digress so back to the run. After about our fifth hill there was a delay breaking the check. This allowed me to have a brief word with my visitor before On On was called and off he plunged down the next valley. I am ashamed to admit that I took a short cut home and was sitting enjoying a beer when the pack breasted the hill led by my visitor. Unfortunately for him he ran into the area which the locals used as a toilet. This delayed him somewhat as he extracted himself and he arrived home to find me already there.

As short cutting never occurred to him he has since gone around telling everyone that I am a very fast runner. This of course was never true.

H3—The day the ship came in, full of hashers en route to Interhash Queenstown NZ

Great to be running during the day when others are working! Hashing at its greatest with people from all over the world running around Port Melbourne on a sunny warm/hot day, showing off Melbourne at its best. Great spontaneous circle with lots of laughs. Short though as the ship was leaving on time and they had to be on it.

Interhash Queenstown NZ—Klingon's run from Queenstown on the Friday marking the start of Interhash 2014. We charged $5 a head and had more beer than we could handle for the circle and nobody complained. A good run, LOADS of visitors from all over the world and a great contingent of Lakesiders.

Sometimes the "loudmouthed yanks" are just so much fun. This guy lead the circle and led the singing and not once was a song sung twice.
